

WAYMAKERS WELCOMES JONATHAN JUDGE TO ITS BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Judge brings management insight and legal expertise to support Waymakers' mission.

IRVINE, Calif., (July XX, 2024) – Waymakers, a nonprofit organization that has provided counseling, education, shelter, conflict resolution and support services to struggling Orange County children and families for more than 50 years, has appointed Jonathan Judge to its board of directors. Judge, head of the Private Labor and Employment Group's Advice and Counsel Team at Atkinson, Andelson, Loya, Ruud & Romo, brings extensive experience representing employers in both private and public sectors and a deep understanding of labor and employment law.

“Waymakers is committed to empowering children and families to advance beyond crisis, fostering encouragement and community throughout the healing process,” said Ronnetta Johnson, CEO of Waymakers. “Jonathan’s insight and experience with employment law, as well as his proven management and leadership skills, will be an asset to our organization. We are thrilled to welcome him to the board.”

In his leadership role at Atkinson, Andelson, Loya, Ruud & Romo, Judge represents employers in both the private and public sectors in employment advice and counsel matters including wage and hour, leaves of absence, and from hiring to firing and everything in between. His expertise includes reasonable accommodation, background checks, I-9 compliance, drug testing, and alternative workweek schedules. He has also represented numerous clients before the Internal Revenue Service on Affordable Care Act penalty assessments

Judge holds a J.D. from the USC Gould School of Law and a B.S. in anthropology from the University of Utah. He currently resides in Huntington Beach with his wife and daughter and works in Cerritos.
